He reports all quiet. The outlaws could not be found in the Blackwater hills, having fled after the fight to Hancock, Tenn., and vicinity of Sneedville, where they now are. None of the outlaws were killed. Jesse Anderson was shot through the left chest. and physicians say he will not recover; Jim Williams wounded in hand and abdomen slightly; Andy Testament wounded in forehead badly; John Livisay wounded in arm, which will compel the amputation of that limb. "The names of the other outlaws, as far as ascertained, are Birt Goens, Thorn Goodman, Mat. Mullins, Hiram Livisay, Joe Long, Jack Anderson, and Richard Bremer. There are others whose names are not yet known. All of them, including wounded. are near Sneedville, Tenn., and send word to Sheriff Doyle they will drop it if he will. They had previously threatened to have his heart's blood. "The fight in which they killed citizen Vandiventer was not made at the United States officers, but to capture and kill Sheriff Doyle, who was aided by six of the Murchett boys (brothers and cousins), Kiah Cunningham, Emmett Wrester, and Vandiventer. There was not a United States officer present at the fight, nor anywhere in the vicinity. The whole affair was one of hostility to Doyle because he and his friends had aided the United States officials. This is all there is of it, and I [the writer in this case] have it from Doyle himself."

Fitzbugh in the case of Richardson vs. Butler et als., reported in the February No., 1877, of the Virginia Law Journal, i exciting considerable comment among the lawyers, and it is one deserving the close attention of all business-men. The decision is, in brief, this: That where a creditor has obtained a judgment constituting a lien upon the real estate of a debtor, which debtor declares said real estate his "homestead." thereby staying the execution of the judgment, and subsequently sells this homestead real estate, that then at once the stay is removed from the judgment-lien. It falls upon the real estate, and can be enforced as if the real estate had never been a homestead. The homestead exemption, in a word, acts as a prop, pushed in by statute law, to hold off this judgment-lien for debtors' benefit alone. Take away the propi. e., sell the property-and the lien falls again upon the property, which is then bound by it. This seems a great hardship to purchasers, but people should not buy lands already encumbered. It fies up property, but that is the effect of such viciously bad laws always. And what will notes ordinance in the Council are not going to be "bulldozed" by a few builders who are opposed to it, and allow this most important measure to fall through. I have talked with many of our leading citizens, and find all of them, without any exception, in favor of the ordinance, and that it be passed at once. Is the ordinance to be "tabled' until we can get up another large first-class accident and a loss of life and limb from some falling building to urge that this question be taken up again? It seems to me that we have had warning enough in the past and such fearful loss of life as to require that this matter be deferred no longer. Let us have an inspector, and let the Council be sure that they give us the right man for the place. Respectfully, May 28, 1877.
